Health system rebooted after AHS board fired

'We start fresh.'
10-member board canned after refusing to cancel $3.2M in bonuses to 99 execs

Alberta Health Minister Fred Horne has sacked the entire board overseeing day-to-day delivery of health care in the province and has announced he is embarking on a system-wide reboot.

"We start fresh," Horne said Wednesday at a news conference in Lethbridge where Premier Alison Redford and her cabinet were meeting. Horne said he would immediately begin talking to stakeholders and patients about the best way to deliver health care that costs Alberta $37 million a day.

"We have to be open to all the possibilities."

Horne said he fired the 10-member board of Alberta Health Services, or AHS, after it refused his directive to cancel $3.2 million in bonus payments to 99 senior executives for the fiscal year that ended in March.

Stephen Lockwood, who was the board's chairman, said Tuesday that the issue was about integrity and honouring contracts.

Horne said the board's decision to go ahead with the payouts was intolerable, given tight government budgets and pay freezes in new contracts for doctors and teachers.

Horne appointed Janet Davidson, who was an executive with Edmonton's former Capital Health region, to be the administrator of AHS in lieu of the board. She is expected to meet with media on Friday.

Dr. Chris Eagle, CEO of Alberta Health Services, remains in place.

In Edmonton, opposition leaders suggested Horne need only look in the mirror to know who is responsible for problems with the board.

"All of this is at Fred Horne's door," said Wildrose Leader Danielle Smith.

Horne has been aware of the bonus payouts for months but did nothing, she said.

"Then we get to the 11th hour and because they're defying the minister's order he ends up having to blow the board up," Smith said.

NDP Leader Brian Mason said the AHS board was made up of businesspeople running health care as if it were a bottom-line corporation.

"These are businesspeople. These are people from the oil patch, the insurance industry ... so they're running it like a corporation and they put their practices into place."

Easing the commute

City vowing new policy on road closures

The city is promising to crack down on road construction barricades and lane closures when there is no work taking place.

Councillors gave administration a green light on Wednesday to draft a detailed new policy that should keep more roadways open, more often.

Coun. Kerry Diotte asked administration to look at the policy earlier this year because he said dozens of constituents were calling. He said the delays infuriate drivers because they have to wait repeatedly at lights.

"Think about all the greenhouse gases that are created by cars if they are stuck waiting for four or five lights," he said.

Transportation general manager Bob Boutilier said the city controls road-closure permits now, but it doesn't do enough to ensure contractors keep roads open.

"They can't start something in the first month, put up a barrier and then, because they can't get a piece of equipment, do nothing for three or four months," he said.

He said companies looking to close all or part of a road are going to have to put more details in their requests.

"You are going to have to explain how you are going to do your project," he said.

The proposed policy would also identify major routes, including the Whitemud, Yellowhead Trail, 97 Street, Gateway Boulevard and Calgary Trail, as major commuter routes that would have tougher restrictions for lane closures.

Hail of a storm pummels the city

Cleanup underway.

Watch, then warning issued Wednesday afternoon amidst multiple reports of funnel clouds

heather.mcintyre@metronews.ca

About a week before the official start of summer, storm season arrived with a bang.

A tornado warning was issued for the entire Edmonton area Wednesday afternoon, as the Capital Region was pelted with heavy rain, hail and wind

Disruptions

- The Edmonton International Airport stopped all operations for the duration of the storm due to a lightning warning, while some students weren't dismissed on time as school boards encouraged each principal to make a decision based on conditions.

- The city remained under a thunderstorm watch heading into Wednesday evening.

from a thunderstorm that also produced funnel clouds.

There was even a report of one touching down on Pigeon Lake, creating a waterspout.

"The conditions were ripe. They were perfect for this kind of storm," said Michele McDougall, weather specialist with Citytv's Breakfast Television.

Due to recent rain, warmth and humidity were trapped at surface levels in the atmosphere, and they were then met by cold air, explained McDougall.

"If it was hotter, it would have been a lot worse," she added.

There was no damage, extreme flooding or injuries reported as of press time, though city drainage-services manager Chris Ward said crews were slated to work overnight to deal with flooded streets, blown manhole covers and clogged catch basins.

In total about 90 calls were made to 311 by 5 p.m., roughly an hour after the warning had been lifted, said Ward.

Environment Canada meteorologist Chris Wielki said the storm was "fairly intense."

Nickel- and quarter-sized hail were reported in the Whyte Avenue and Fort Saskatchewan areas, respectively, he said, adding radar indicates the heaviest rainfall was in north-east Edmonton.

"This is the season," said McDougall. "And we really haven't had hot, hot days yet. But as soon as we do, this is why we are in storm season now."

Chaos. Fort McMurray at 'the mercy of Mother Nature' amid severe flooding

Volunteers are filling sandbags in Fort McMurray but, for the moment, there's nowhere to put them.

Brad Grainger with the Regional Municipality of Wood Buffalo says flood waters are moving too quickly and riverbanks are too unstable for people to get close.

A state of emergency and a boil-water order for the area were declared Tuesday due to flooding of the Hangingstone River and concern over the Clearwater River and its tributaries.

Residents in 275 homes are on evacuation alert.

Grainger says the community is at "the mercy of Mother Nature" since more rain is forecast for the week.

Investigation. Senior's death deemed suspicious

The suspicious death of an elderly man at a seniors' complex is being investigated by Edmonton police.

Officers received a call about a sudden death at an apartment at 117 Avenue and 95 Street just before 10:46 a.m. Wednesday, said police spokesperson Chad Orydzuk.

On Wednesday afternoon, several police cars and officers were at Norwood Golden Manor apartment.

A resident, who didn't want to be named, said the victim had "bad friends" who he would let into the building and drink with in his room.

If the death is declared a homicide, it would be the 13th of 2013 and the fourth since the beginning of June.

Two-day event promotes public pride in urban design

MakescapeYEG.

Interactive conference, public discussion breathes new life into Centennial Plaza

edmonton@metronews.ca

Grids of grass, food trucks, vendors, interactive sculptures and even DJs will flock to Centennial Plaza on Thursday and Friday to revitalize one of the city's most inactive public spaces.

The two-day event, named MakescapeYEG, wants to bring the topics of design and architecture to the forefront of public discussion by turning the plaza into a spirited and interactive experience.

"Makescape started as a reaction to the idea of holding a downtown design conference that was $850 to attend," said Chris Hoek, one of the organizers of the mini-festival. "While great for industry, it's not so great for the general public."

MakescapeYEG was then created to provide a free and more hands-on version of that conference.

"We're bringing forward ideas to get people talking and begin a discussion," Hoek said.

Edmontonians who plan

An artist's rendition of Centennial Plaza outfitted for MakescapeYEG, a two-day festival meant to highlight Edmonton's architecture and urban design, and provide a forum for discussion on those topics. CONTRIBUTED to attend the event agree with Hoek's assertion that open discourse about design is vital for the city.

"Design and architecture is meant to serve the city as a whole and therefore should also receive input from the public," said Justine Magat, a local woman who plans to attend Makescape. "It's very important."

Makescape will also see

Mark Sterling, an award-winning Toronto architect and urban designer, as well as Carol Belanger, Edmonton's City Architect, host a discussion concerning public design.

Some of the main features of MakescapeYEG will be the numerous grids of real grass scattered around the plaza, meant to represent the vibrancy of Edmonton's design and culture.

"We want to make the square alive," said Hoek.

Magat hopes that this kind of event will occur more frequently in the future.

"I think that it's a great opportunity to come together as a community and make our city a more beautiful space," she said.

MakescapeYEG will begin at 5 p.m. on Thursday and will go until 9 p.m. on Friday.

Public space, public design

"We are trying to bring that discussion to a public space. That space ended up being Centennial Plaza, which also happens to be a rather underused and underutilized space."

MakescapeYEG organizer Chris Hoek

Hacker tips 'not sufficient to proceed': Police

As hacktivist group Anonymous released a second video about alleged Edmonton sexual predators, police said the videos have hampered their investigations and distracted officers from other work.

On Monday, Anonymous released a YouTube video showing images of two men the group allege are sexual predators.

At a press conference Monday afternoon, Bob Andrews, the officer in charge of ALERT's Internet Child Exploitation unit, said officers have tried to work with Anonymous, but the person or people behind the group has been "reluctant" to do so.

A second video, titled "48 hours" was released late Tuesday.

While the second video doesn't release any more names of alleged pedophiles, it states that the group will release more names in other cities.

In a press release issued Wednesday, ALERT said they will continue to work with Anonymous and that their position remains the same.

"Anonymous knows how to reach us. We will not continue to have this conversation through the media," the statement read.

ALERT said the information provided by Anonymous is "not sufficient to proceed." METRO

Old building gets new life as Canada's largest indoor paintball facility

Edmonton Paintball Centre. Months-long search for venue leads pair to building chock-full of history

ANNALISE KLINGBEIL

A dollhouse, a dream catcher and nature murals are a few of the things two entrepreneurs found while transforming an 85,000-square-foot abandoned office building into Canada's largest indoor paintball facility.

After six months of searching for a space that met zoning guidelines and was both spacious and within their budget, Rob Davy and Brittany Anderson finally found what they were looking for.

Two weeks ago they signed a lease on a decades-old building located on 107A Avenue and 100 Street that has housed the Edmonton Public School Board, Alcoholics Anonymous and the Edmonton Mennonite Centre for Newcomers.

Now they're busy tearing down walls in the three-and-a-half-storey concrete box and removing a host of objects left by previous tenants.

"It's nice to be able to do what we're doing, which is taking this abandoned space and turning it into something," Davy said.

The couple have enlisted an architect and day labourers to convert what was once a maze of offices into paintball playing fields that will include small cars, houses and a mock oil well site with a derrick and fuel tanks.

"This place is huge," said Anderson, as she stepped over dry-wall with a flashlight in hand on a recent walk-through.

In terms of square-footage, the completed space will be Canada's largest indoor paintball facility, something Davy said was a pleasant accident after months of searching for a space.

Who's who

The people behind the Edmonton Paintball Centre:

- Brittany Anderson, who has never played paintball before, brings marketing experience to the venture.
- Rob Davy has been involved with numerous businesses including Nexopia and an outdoor paintball facility by Ardrossan.
- Both quit their full-time jobs after signing the lease, and are hoping to have the Edmonton Paintball Centre open later this summer.

Research links low birth weight and vision loss

Low birth weight could play a role in advanced-age vision loss, researchers at the University of Alberta suggest.

The research team found that the vision of underweight rats deteriorated much more extensively than that of their normal-weight counterparts. Their study is published in the peer-reviewed journal PLOS One.

"What we're seeing is vision complications either earlier in life or more exaggerated," Dr. Sandra Davidge said.

In addition to a general daylight vision loss, the researchers noticed a significant decline in night vision as the rats reached "elderly" ages.

"There's nothing that you can detect in terms of night-vision issues throughout the life of the animal until a certain late protracted time point," said Dr. Yves Sauvé, the lead researcher.

More study is needed to see if the link exists in humans. Research is also underway on whether early intervention can reduce or prevent vision loss.

Sauvé attributes his team's success to their innovative collaboration between vision and fetal-development specializations. "It would not have been possible without joining forces," he said.

Tour of Alberta 'in very good shape' for Sept. 3

Cycling road race. Organizers announce sponsorships, reveal winning jerseys

ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

When the Tour of Alberta crosses the province in late summer, organizers are hoping fans will be just as drawn into the action.

"In six days we are going to have a lot of partying with a race in between," organizer Duane Vienneau said on Wednesday, as organizers announced sponsors, fan opportunities and revealed the winning jerseys.

The race, which starts on Sept. 3, will take riders all over Alberta, starting in Edmonton and heading through the Rockies before ending in Calgary.

Vienneau said Edmonton will host an event the day before the race starts that will let everyone from "kids in strollers right up to cycling enthusiasts" take a spin across the finish line.

The tour is partnering with CASA, a local group that works on children's mental health, to host the fun ride. "It is huge. The ride is going to bring so much awareness to everything in our city," executive director Nadine Samycia said.

Organizers also announced 15 sponsors for the race and Vienneau said it has almost all of the funds it needs. "We are very, very close. We are in very good shape," he said.

Caucus resignation. Riding team pressured to call for byelection: Rathgeber

Local MP Brent Rathgeber said his constituency association was pressured to do a lot more than distance themselves from him when he left caucus last week.

After his departure from the Conservative caucus, Rathgeber's constituency association released a statement saying it was disappointed and would be looking for a new candidate.

Rathgeber said that's not surprising.

"The riding association is made up of hardcore (Conservative) supporters, not all of which supported me in the nomination. Their job is to represent the party on the ground," he said.

Several Conservative ministers called on Rathgeber to resign and Rathgeber said the party wanted his constituency association to say the same.

"They were under considerable pressure from the party above, that likes to control everything," he said.

Rathgeber said the notion of a byelection was always ridiculous, because the party never made such demands when MPs crossed to the Conservative party.

"When it happens to them, it's completely offside and it demands a resignation," he said sarcastically.

Netanyahu to Iran: 'We will never allow another Holocaust'

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu began his two-day visit to Poland, which Nazis occupied during the Second World War and where they committed the worst crimes ever against the Jewish people, with a warning about a potential Holocaust from Iran.

Netanyahu said Wednesday the "so-called" Iranian presidential election will "change nothing" in the Islamic republic's quest for nuclear weapons and that the regime will continue to pursue a bomb aimed at destroying Israel.

"This is a regime that is building nuclear weapons with the express purpose to annihilate Israel's six million Jews," Netanyahu said, alluding to the number of Jews killed by the Nazis during the Second World War.

"We will not allow this to happen. We will never allow another Holocaust."

Cleveland. Castro pleads not guilty as defence aims to avoid death penalty

A man accused of holding three women captive in his Cleveland home for about a decade pleaded not guilty Wednesday to hundreds of rape and kidnapping charges, and the defence hinted at avoiding a trial with a plea deal if the death penalty were ruled out.

The death penalty is in play because among the accusations facing Ariel Castro, 52, is that he forced a miscarriage by one of the women, which is considered a killing under Ohio law. That charge doesn't include a possible death penalty, but a prosecutor has said that's under review.

Attorney Craig Weintraub acknowledged that "certain charges in the indictment cannot be disputed" and said the defence was working to avoid an "unnecessary trial" with a possible death penalty sentence. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former CIA employee Edward Snowden, who said Wednesday that he has had several opportunities to flee Hong Kong

The former CIA employee who leaked top-secret information about U.S. surveillance programs said in a new interview in Hong Kong on Wednesday that he is not attempting to hide from justice, but hopes to use the city as a base to reveal wrongdoing.

Edward Snowden dropped out of sight after checking out of a Hong Kong hotel on Monday. The South China Morning Post said it was able to locate and interview him on Wednesday, providing brief excerpts on its website.

It said Snowden, who has been both praised and condemned for releasing documents about U.S. telephone and Internet surveillance programs, said he was "neither a traitor nor hero. I'm an American."

Asked about his choice of Hong Kong to leak the information, he said, "People who think I made a mistake in picking Hong Kong as a location misunderstand my intentions. I am not here to hide from justice; I am here to reveal criminality."

The newspaper quoted him as saying he had several opportunities to flee from Hong Kong, but that he "would rather stay and fight the United States government in the courts, because I have faith in Hong Kong's rule of law."

CIA's deputy director retires

CIA Deputy Director Michael Morell, who managed the resignation of CIA chief David Petraeus over an extramarital affair and defended the agency's performance over the attack on a U.S. diplomatic post in Benghazi, Libya, retired on Wednesday.

Morell retired after 33 years at the CIA, including two stints as acting director and one as deputy director. He was passed over for the top CIA spot by President Barack Obama in favour of the president's counterterrorism adviser, John Brennan, who announced Morell's departure.

"I was most looking forward to ... the opportunity to work side-by-side once again with Michael Morell," said Brennan, noting that they had begun their careers at the CIA in 1980. "As much as I would selfishly like to keep Michael right where he is for as long as possible, he has decided to retire to spend more time with his family and to pursue other professional opportunities."

Brennan said Morell will be replaced by Avril Haines, the first woman to hold that position. Haines has been a White House deputy assistant and deputy counsel for national security affairs since 2010. Before that, she was assistant legal

Military accused of intimidating witness

Defence committee.

Soldier wounded during Taliban ambush allegedly told to tone down his testimony

Opposition Liberals tried again on Wednesday to hold military officers to account for allegedly attempting to intimidate an injured Canadian soldier into toning down his testimony before a parliamentary committee.

Cpl. Glen Kirkland, who was severely wounded in Afghanistan five years ago during a Taliban ambush, said last week that he was told to "not speak about certain things" when he testified before the House of Commons defence committee.

In an interview with CTV News, Kirkland claimed that he was even threatened with a dishonourable discharge.

Liberal defence critic John McKay said that's tantamount to trying to intimidate a witness, and he put forward a motion calling on the committee to inform the Commons.

An attempt to "shape" testimony before Parliament is "as serious as lying to a committee," McKay said.

Kirkland, 29, said he suffers from survivor's guilt and severe post-traumatic stress.

The military recently presented him with a discharge plan that would have seen him out of uniform well ahead of the 10-year service mark he wanted to achieve for a full pension. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Not the first time

This is not the first time the military has tried to intimidate serving members when it came to speaking out about problems with the care they receive.

- When former veterans ombudsman Pat Stogran held his farewell news conference in September 2010, complaining about bureaucracy and red tape, two soldiers at the event said they had been ordered by the brass not to speak publicly.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper says arbitrary timelines won't determine when Canada inks a free-trade pact with the European Union.

Harper told journalists Wednesday in London that his government will only agree to a deal when it meets Canada's best interests.

"Obviously, these have been long discussions. They're continuing. We have been making a lot of progress, and they are the biggest trade negotiations Canada has ever had," the PM said.

"Obviously this will be a big discussion this week — but ... that said, we are not going to set a timeline or a fixed date on which we're going to have an agreement."

Voice-activated texts a greater distraction for drivers: Study

Infotainment systems.

Automakers pitching 'safer' hands-free devices that use voice commands to turn on wipers, post Facebook messages, order pizza

Dashboard technology that lets drivers text and email with voice commands — marketed as a safer alternative — actually is more distracting than simply talking on a cell-phone, a AAA study found.

Talking on a hands-free phone isn't significantly safer for drivers than talking on a hand-held phone, and using hands-free devices that translate speech into text is the most distracting of all, researchers reported in a study released Wednesday.

Student driver Russ Martin's electroencephalographic-configured skullcap is hooked to an AAA research vehicle during a demonstration in support of their study on distracted driving in Landover, Md. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Speech-to-text systems that enable drivers to send or scroll through email and text messages required greater concentration by drivers.

The greater the concentration required to perform a task, the more likely a driver is to develop what researchers call "tunnel vision" or "inattention blindness." Drivers will stop scanning the roadway or ignore their side and rearview mirrors. Instead, they look straight ahead, but fail to see what's in front of them, like red lights and pedestrians. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cyber criminals

Canada top choice for virtual bases, new study says

Canada's clean reputation makes it a top destination for cyber criminals to launch global attacks on businesses, a new study says. Instead of choosing Russia or China, some cyber criminals have been setting up servers with Canadian IP addresses for their attacks, says Websense's cybercrime report card on Canada.

In 2012, Canada was the No. 3 country of choice for cyber criminals to set up virtual bases with advanced malware for corporate espionage, said the report unveiled at the SC Congress in Toronto, a conference on information security.

Websense said it's the first time it has released this metric for Canada. The United States was No. 1 and the Netherlands was the No. 2 choice in 2012.

Canada not cougar town? Dating website bares its fangs over 'censorship'

Ashley Madison

Avid Life Media has plenty of experience generating news coverage over censorship of its adultery dating website Ashley Madison, which has been dropped from search engines and banned from advertising on the TTC and during the Super Bowl.

A cougar (a woman interested in younger men, not a cat) shoves a meat sandwich into a younger woman's face. She pushes another girl off her chair; french fries fly everywhere. Is it too violent for TV advertising?

CougarLife.com is crying "censorship" because the Television Bureau of Canada has ordered that the ad can't be aired unless those shots are removed.

Toronto-based Avid Life Media, which owns Cougar Life, alerted the media on Tuesday — issuing a press release and offering an interview with the ad's lead actress, porn star Julia Ann — claiming that the spot, which has run in the U.S., U.K. and Australia, "has been banned from Canadian airwaves by Television Bureau of Canada."

"I find it interesting that in a country where a sport like, say, hockey is so prevalent, admired, supported and played everywhere — they're heroes and all I have to do is put a sandwich in a girl's face and it's banned for violence," Julia Ann said.

But Avid and the Television Bureau of Canada disagree on whether that's true.

Theresa Treutler, president of the Television Bureau of Canada, said the ad was not rejected, but put into a "pending" file until the company and the TVB can come up with a solution to the concerns.

Avid CEO Noel Biderman argues that cutting the key scenes is not different from banning the ad altogether.

Parking-snitch app pays you to help The Man

Winnipeg. (1) Snap pic of a parking violation; (2) send it to police or private lot operators; (3) get cut of fine; (4) try to live with your guilty conscience

Some entrepreneurial Winnipeggers are set to unleash an army of bounty hunters keen on nabbing people who park in disabled parking spots without a permit or in front of a fire hydrant. All that would be needed is a smartphone and the "Spot-Squad" app.

Co-founder Chris Johnson says he and his partners haven't yet signed any agreements to give informants a percentage of any ticket fines, but he adds that some private parking lot operators are interested.

He says while many people say they would never snitch on a fellow driver, he expects they

Legal minefield

- Brian Bowman, a Winnipeg lawyer specializing in privacy and social media law, said the app could open up a legal minefield. Just because a car is parked in a public place doesn't mean the driver can't expect some privacy rights, he suggested.

would privately jump at the chance to make a few bucks while cracking down on inconsiderate parkers.

The app would allow people to snap a picture of a parking violation and send the photo to police, private parking operators or city wardens. A parking warden could then be dispatched to issue a ticket.

If a ticket resulted in a fine, informants would get a cut or could direct the cash to charity.

Comic book with a super story sells for $175K

A rare copy of the comic book featuring Superman's first appearance that went undiscovered for more than 70 years in the insulation of a Minnesota house has sold in an online auction for $175,000 US. The high bidder for the copy of Action Comics No. 1 was a "hard core, golden age comic book collector," said Stephen Fishler, CEO of ComicConnect.com.

Facebook is introducing hashtags, the number signs used on Twitter, Instagram and other services to identify topics being discussed and allow users to search for them.

Facebook said in a blog post that users will be able to click a hashtag to see a feed of discussions about a particular topic. For example, typing a number sign in front of "ladygaga" will turn the words into a link that users can click on to find posts about Lady Gaga. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WestJet must compensate bumped fliers

The Canadian Transportation Agency says WestJet must provide compensation to customers bumped on flights to and from Canada.

The agency was responding to a complaint alleging that WestJet's international tariff — a contract between a customer and the carrier — has several "unreasonable and conflicting" rules for customers unable to travel because a flight has been oversold.

Bank of Canada. Goodbye bashes for Carney cost $30K

Saying goodbye to departing Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney last month cost Canadians about $30,000.

Farewell bashes hosted by the Bank of Canada in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa — and attended by the wealthy elite of Bay Street, among others — offered guests canapes, fine wine, floral arrangements and a harpist.

The heady round of farewells for Carney, who left his job on May 31 for greener pastures at the Bank of England, began with a reception in Toronto.

The posh May 2 event for 200 people was catered by Oliver and Bonacini for $9,300, including almost $500 for flowers. The evening at the Toronto Board of Trade ballroom drew key business people and investors, who heard a speech by Carney.

Another reception in Montreal drew a similar group of 150 guests at the University Club of Montreal. Guests heard brief remarks from Carney, as well as from his newly appointed replacement, Stephen Poloz. The event cost $4,438.74.

Finally, the bank held May 30 events at its downtown Ottawa headquarters on Wellington Street, a reception for 200 people and a later dinner in its dining room for 80 select guests, many of them key policy-makers. Poloz also attended. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Czech firms show off flying bicycle

Observers watch a test flight of the remote-controlled Flying Bike in Prague on Wednesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Is it a bike? Is it a plane? Three Czech companies have teamed up to make a prototype of an electric bicycle that successfully took off Wednesday inside an exhibition hall in Prague and landed safely after a remote-controlled, five-minute flight.

Looking like a heavy mountain bike, it has two battery-power propellers in the front, two in the back and one each on the sides. A dummy rode in the saddle.

Milan Duchek, technical director of Duratec, a bicycle frames maker, says more powerful batteries will be needed before a human takes a two-wheeled flight.

HERITAGE IN 2 CANADIAN MINUTES

O Canada! Let's fire up the burnt toast, cut holes in our peach baskets and gather in our house built of sod: The Heritage Minutes are back! Don't believe it? Well, the government has just put aside $400,000 toward new Heritage Minute TV ads, according to The Canadian Press.

The money equates to two Heritage Minutes. This is big — like Upper Canada Rebellion of 1837 big.

When the news spread around my workplace, it was as though The Heritage Minutes was the name of our favourite band and they were getting back together. "Oh my God I love them!!!" was the near-universal reaction.

There was even a generation gap: People over 40 looked deeply unimpressed, before arguing that the only true Canadian PSA series is Hinterland Who's Who. Squares.

For a more complete story of Hinterland Who's Who, they can contact the Canadian Wildlife Service in Ottawa. But if you're of a certain age, you know that Heritage Minutes are

HE SAYS
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

where Canadian television exists in its purest form: Seventy-five mini-movies that are literally and figuratively all over the map.

Some are polished and professional; others look like YouTube high-school projects. "Film a 60-second short about Canadian history. Only one student may use Pierce Brosnan."

My personal favourite, because it was so poor, is about Marion Orr, first female pilot to land stock footage of an airplane onto a foggy soundstage.

It also contained a man being a slack-jawed moron at the sight of her, which was a running theme throughout the series. Between misunderstanding the meaning of Canada, mistaking Lake Michigan for the Pacific and laughing at female voters, teachers and doctors, the series could have been called, "White Guys Get It Wrong." Of course, this makes it a bang-on retelling of world history.

I'm thrilled the series is back, though I'm a bit distressed that there are only two planned. Surely we have it in us to produce another 75?

I have so many ideas.

For instance, to highlight our culture, imagine an extremely smug woman explaining to a stodgy American visitor that in Canada you can partake in such delicacies as Crispy Crunch, Coffee Crisp and Aero bars. "Chocolate filled with air bubbles. It's a Canadian idea." The American's head explodes.

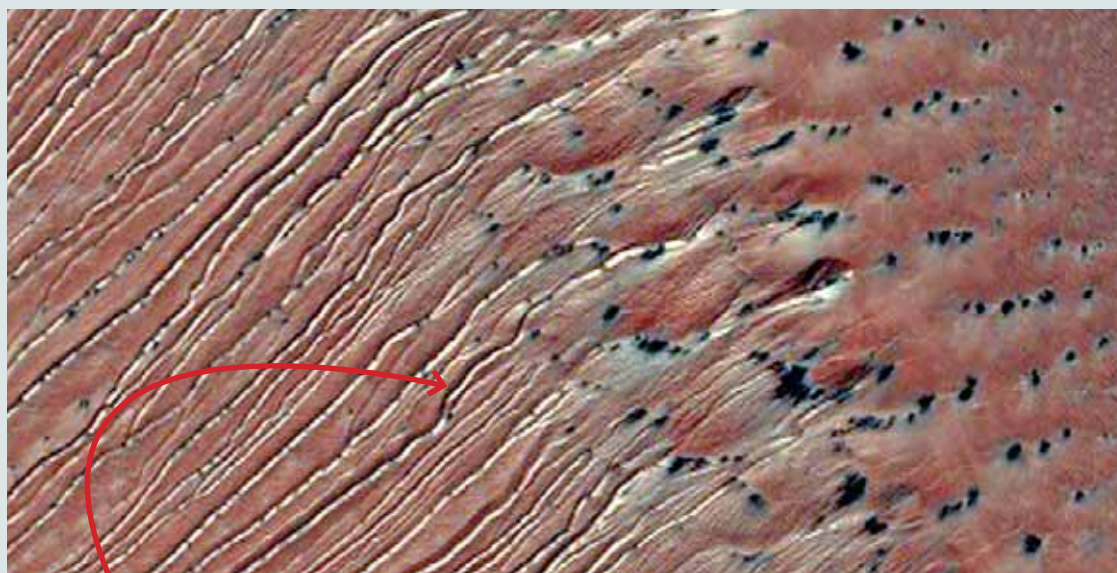

Or, in a special sequel to one of the most popular existing Heritage Minutes, we could see neurologist Wilder Penfield suddenly remember that he put bread in the toaster about five minutes ago. "Oh yeah, right," he says, before taking a bite.

Or think of this inspiring scene: To explain our politics, we see a crowd of the disenfranchised, gathered in Ottawa and chanting for their right to vote — louder and louder, braver and more sure of themselves, again and again. Then the camera pans to reveal ... Prime Minister Stephen Harper. "Sorry," he tells the assembled crowd. "Parliament is prorogued." He slams the door behind him.

If we don't film these important moments people will rightly be asking, "Dang it, why didn't we shoot them?" With a bevy of new Heritage Minutes, we'll have a whole new bedrock of Canadiana to leave for our children, just like we had growing up. Now the people will know we were here.

Yes, Martians go sand duning

NASA/JPL-CALTECH/UNIV. OF ARIZONA

Dry ice chunks create unique trails

If Martians did extreme sports, you can imagine they would leave trails like these.

Mars' strange grooves, or "linear gullies," on its sand dunes may have been made by sleds of sliding frozen carbon dioxide.

NASA's discovery is the result of examining images from the Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter spacecraft. These grooves, spotted more than a decade ago, varied in length from only a few hundred metres to 2.5 kilometres and once posed a long-standing mystery as to how they were formed. Serina Diniega, planetary scientist at NASA, and her team managed to deduce that they are caused in springtime as the thawing layer of dry ice surfs down the Martian slopes.

Mars's climate

- Wintertime. Layers of solid CO<sub>2</sub> can reach thickness levels of two metres.
- Springtime. CO<sub>2</sub> sublimates (vaporizes without becoming a liquid) and chunks of the dry ice break off and surf down the slopes. The falling ice blocks are lubricated by the carbon dioxide dune, leaving the gullies behind.

men of The Full Monty decide to bare it all.

Now, it's Edmonton's turn for a dose of bare derrière. Kicking off June 14 at La Cite Francophone theatre, the cast of The Full Monty are ready to strut their stuff on stage. But, pulling the play together hasn't been easy.

"There are many challenges with this show," explains Director and Choreographer Adam Mazerolle-Kuss.

"Casting is the first one. The parts are very specific and cannot be deviated from. We needed an African American man, a teenage boy, and a woman of indeterminate age. Not to mention eight of the men had to be comfortable with various stage of undress, along with everyone else (involved in the show.)"

Mazerolle-Kuss goes on to say other hurdles the crew overcame included incorporating more than 20 locations into the set design, along with having a car, two full bathrooms, and two full beds on stage.

"The cast and crew have met all the challenges with amazing talent," he says. "The show is truly an honour to be part of."

Part of Mazerolle-Kuss' appreciation for the show comes from how he got involved.

"I was offered the show in 2012 and was surprised to be offered such a big undertaking. I was drawn by how the piece turns the daily pressures and societal judgements placed on women and puts it on men. The actors are so talented, dedicated and motivated. They hit the ground running and their passion bounces off the stage."

Put dad on read alert this Father's Day

If you don't have time to golf or fish with your old man, you could at least get him a book about those things. Look no further than this list of books. Whether he is a fly-fishing fan or wants to hunker down in a transatlantic adventure, here are our picks for pop.

ALISON BOWEN
Metro World News in New York City

Very different journeys across the pond

TransAtlantic, a new novel from National Book Award winner Colum McCann, weaves a story detailing three different crossings of the Atlantic in dynamic time periods, from an Irish famine to a modern-day presidential visit from Barack Obama. The novel moves through 150 years and two continents, starring historical figures including Obama and Frederick Douglas alongside characters like aviators attempting the first nonstop flight.

For golf laughs and maybe a few tears

The new memoir "Loopers: A Caddy's Twenty Year Golf Odyssey" tracks decades of caddy adventures. John Dunn says this wasn't the long-term goal he envisioned, but he ended up appearing at golf courses across the country, hitchhiking to get to some of the fanciest greens in the nation. He tells tales of assisting everyone from regular golfers to movie stars — and making as much as $500 a day in tips. But it's not all laughs. The book also touches on problems that plague caddies, like heavy drinking and gambling.

Strengthen a father-daughter relationship

In The Entertainer: Movies, Magic and My Father's Twentieth Century, Margaret Talbot, a writer for the New Yorker, weaves old Hollywood stories and family legends together from the life of her father, actor Lyle Talbot. As well as following along on his adventures, the book also tracks changes in the entertainment industry.

Catch this fly fishing classic for him

Fishing books might be a classic dad gift, but get him a tailored book toward one specific type of fishing this time with Why I Fly Fish by Chris Santella. The author interviewed 25 fishermen, from fly-fishing professionals to celebrities like Henry Winkler, all explaining their personal reasons for the pursuit.

Take him on a historic, sub-aquatic adventure

This new book takes an underwater view of the Second World War. In The War Below: The Story of Three Submarines That Battled Japan, James Scott describes a submarine force that destroyed a Japanese merchant fleet, hurting that country's economy. Tales include an undersea appendectomy with kitchen utensils. Drawing on diaries, letters and interviews with veterans, this is a fresh story for any Second World War fan.

Portlandia is as sustainable as ever

Two more seasons.
Comedy renewed for more eco-friendly, cage-free zaniness

In the last season of Portlandia, the mayor of this sustainability-obsessed city vanished in shame after he was singled out as Portland's "No. 1 electricity hog," Portland went into a blackout, cats barked, creepy music played, and a bizarre Australian who calls himself "Birdman" told guests at a bed and breakfast "there is no civilization."

Carrie and Fred — about the only characters in Portlandia with any grip on reality — tracked down the mayor at a compound in the wilderness where he was leading a band of savages, a la Colonel Kurtz in Apocalypse Now.

"Do you come as assassins?" asks the muddled mayor, played by Kyle MacLachlan.

It's impossible for Fred and Carrie to get through to him, until they reveal that Seattle — Portland's archrival for hipness and progressivism — is about to take over their fair city.

"Under the cover of darkness, they might erect a Space Needle in Portland," says Carrie, rousing the mayor from his stupor and prompting him to return to his office to get the lights turned back on.

And so ended season three of Portlandia.

There is a line from the first season of Portlandia that quickly became the show's trademark: "Portland is a city where young people go to retire."

That's not the case for the creators and two stars of the show — Portlander Carrie Brownstein and Fred Armisen of Saturday Night Live fame. They are always looking for new ways to keep the show from getting stale.

Season three, which ended this past March, was driven less by short sketches and more by narrative and character development.

The cable channel IFC said Wednesday it's picking up the show for two more seasons. They will premiere early next year and in 2015. Brownstein says the show will continue on the longer-narrative path, with more exploration of the dark side.

It's too early to say what's going to happen after 2015. But that might be the end of the road for Portlandia.

"I'd like to develop and write other shows, comedy of some sort," the 38-year-old Brownstein said in an interview at a Portland coffee shop.

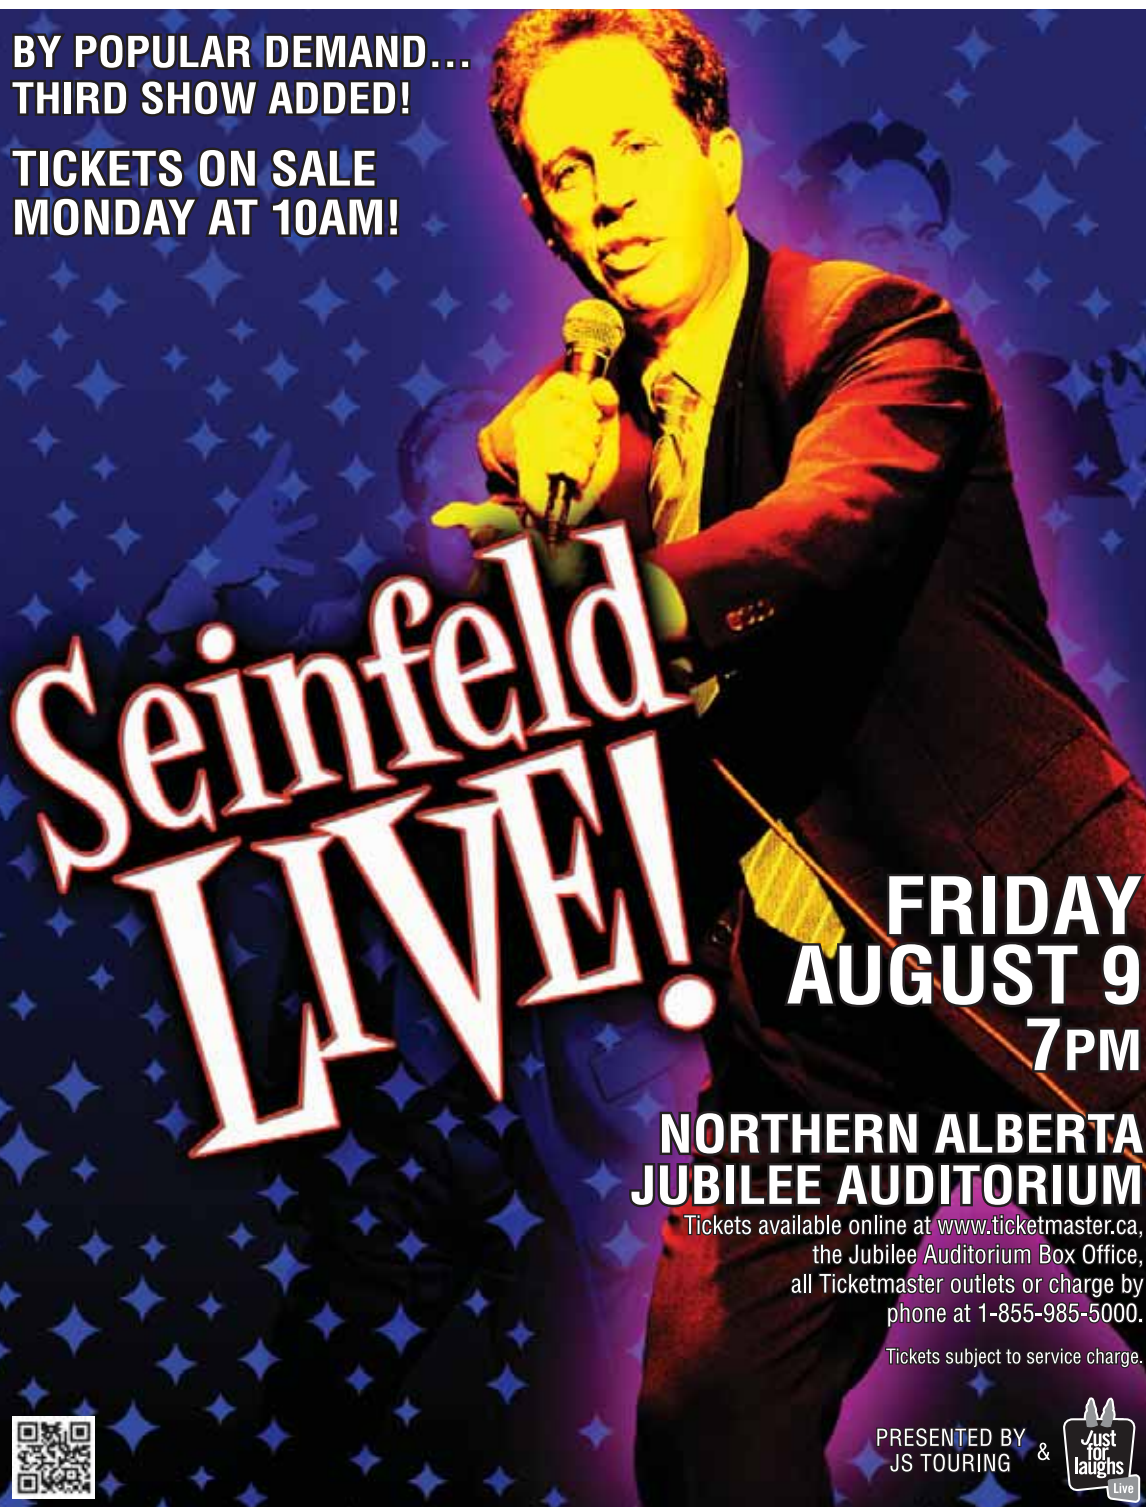

"Five seasons intuitively feels like the right amount of time for Portlandia to be around," she said.

"I always think people overstay their welcome. It's better to leave people wanting more. But you never know."

Picking on Portland?

If Portlandia is a send up of overzealous progressives and hipsters, it's become hip to watch the show. It's the most-watched series on IFC, whose targeted audience is the 18 to 49 age range. Brownstein said Portland is not "the sole inspiration for the show," but that the city serves as a "signifier for an emotional landscape people are traversing." In Portlandia, that emotional landscape is largely populated by sanctimonious humans whose obsessive pursuit of a sustainable lifestyle can clash with the desires of others.

She's got bite — and a funny bone

True Blood. Actress Kristin Bauer Straten talks about her strong female character and what she's doing this season (no spoilers)

CAVALLO
Metro World News in New York

When we last left HBO's True Blood, the war between the humans and the vampires had just reached a boiling point and the air was thick with the threat of impending violence. Well, more violence. A lot of blood is spilled in this show, but there's a lot of humour as well. More than most shows of its ilk (except, perhaps Showtime's Dexter) True Blood has managed to strike a fine balance between darkness and light. Pam — the bisexual, acid-tongued, bar-owning vampire, who stomps all over human and vamp underlings alike in spike-heeled boots — exacts violence and comedy in equally skilled measure. We checked in with Kristin Bauer Straten, who plays Pam, before the sixth season premieres on June 16.

What can you tell me about what's going on with Pam this season, without revealing any spoilers?

That's always the challenge, isn't it? We've been shooting such long hours all week that I've got to get caught up on the trailers so I know what they reveal. I think it's safe to say there is a human-vampire conflict that's escalated from what the Authority did last year. And that, of course, causes problems for Pam. So she's trying to figure out her relationship with her new baby/lover, you know, Rutina (Wesley, who plays Tara). And she's just reunited with her Maker; she wasn't sure if he was alive. And then, on top of it, the humans are fighting back.

When the show first started, did you know that Pam was going to become such a big part of the show? I definitely did not. Yeah, that was a really lovely surprise because, when I auditioned, they said that it was a guest starring role, possibly recurring. And first season, once Alex (Skarsgård) and I started they kept calling us back. But season two, there wasn't as much Pam. So all of a sudden when season three came around and they started adding quite a bit more Pam, that was a lovely surprise because I love the role and I also love the people I'm working with. We have so much fun. They're very, very fun people. The hours are long so it makes a huge difference.

Pam is actually one of my favourite characters on the show, and she has really evolved: straight-up evil in the beginning, but now they're revealing a lot more layers. Do you think she's more good than bad?

I don't know if it is a bad sign, or if I'm becoming sort of delusional, but I don't know if she's good or evil — but she's definitely... correct. I feel like what she says, we're all thinking. You know, she only kills bad people. I feel like she's a little bit of the person we all wish we could be, but we wouldn't be able to maintain jobs and friends (laughs). And Pam is lucky enough to have stepped out of, on purpose, all of those concerns. And, you know, to be top of the food chain, she doesn't have to worry about liking anybody or vice-versa, people liking her especially. I just think it's really refreshing.

Speaking to that, I feel that there are more powerful female characters in the show than weak ones. In fact, maybe more powerful female characters than powerful male characters. Do you think that's true?

Yup, I agree with you. These writers, I think are very sensitive to writing strong female characters. And in my career, that's just been rare. I haven't personally gotten to play terribly strong characters before this. I really enjoyed the characters I played, but they were vulnerable, possibly not too bright. You know, using sexuality to try and get by. I think it's a combination of HBO, and Alan Ball, and our other producers that are sensitive to this. On that note, I think Pam and other female characters do use their sexuality as a tool, but it's in an empowered way, not in a weak way.

Amanda Bynes has at least one person in her corner: Former The Amanda Show co-star Drake Bell is standing up for the troubled actress despite her recent arrest and frequent Twitter tirades. “I talk to her every day. She’s a sweetheart. I had lunch with her yesterday, and she’s brilliant. She’s good, and she’s healthy,” Bell tells OK! Magazine. “It hurts me and it upsets me” the way the media has been portraying Bynes, he explains. “Anytime I’ve ever been with Amanda, she’s totally coherent, totally there, totally everything,” he says. “I’m like, ‘Dude, you come off crazy.’ She’s like, ‘I know, but I don’t mean to. I just changed the way I look!’”

Amanda Bynes

Penn Badgley

Badgley and Kravitz split but ‘on good terms’

Gossip Girl star Penn Badgley and Zoe Kravitz have reportedly called it quits after nearly two years of dating, according to Us Weekly. “It is all good between them. It wasn’t a sad breakup,” a source says. “It just wasn’t working. It really did end on good terms, though. They are at two different stages in their careers. They just didn’t have time for each other.”

Kruger and Jackson to do marriage U-turn

After seven years of dating — and insisting that marriage isn’t that big of a deal to them — Diane Kruger and Joshua Jackson have reportedly changed their minds and are ready to tie the knot, according to Us Weekly. “Josh and Diane are very close to getting engaged,” a source close to the couple says. “They decided they’re ready for the next step. They’re excited!” The source says Jackson is planning to propose this summer and the wedding will happen “imminently.” The Fringe star was singing a completely different tune a year ago, telling the magazine, “Marriage is important for the people it’s important for, but neither one of us is particularly religious, so I don’t think there’s any particular push.”

Justin Bieber ALL IMAGES GETTY

‘Bad’ boy Bieber’s fans all heading in One Direction

At least one group is feeling good about Justin Bieber’s recent scandals and bouts with growing pains. “One Direction is benefiting greatly from Justin’s a-hole behaviour,” a source tells Radar Online. “All of the little girls that loved Bieber don’t love him anymore because ‘he’s bad’ and they are moving on to One Direction. The parents of these young fans are resentful of Justin’s behaviour and don’t think he’s a wholesome influence on their children anymore. So they’re pushing for their kids to like One Direction instead.” And the changing attitudes toward Bieber aren’t lost on the British boy band. “Both them and their team is fully aware that they are gaining fans who used to love Bieber, and they know it’s the perfect time to capitalize on it and swoop in to replace him,” the source adds.

FATHER'S DAY

Thursday, June 13, 2013

Father's Day coincides with the summer grilling, so think about a gift of a stainless steel barbecue set for dad. MONKEY BUSINESS IMAGES/VEER

Specialized gifts for the special dad

Interests. From gadgets to sports and barbecue, find the perfect present this Father's Day

Buying something special for dad this Father's Day and want to forego the usual tie and cologne?

Consider some of these ideas — from the dad who feels at home in the kitchen to the dad who prefers to be one with nature, find the perfect gift that yours will love.

The gadget guy

For the dad who loves tech toys, a satellite radio will provide hours of entertainment, for the car and to take on-the-go. The commute to work will be more enjoyable as he listens to his choice of sports, talk, comedy and commercial-free music or catches up on the news. Enhance the backyard barbecue party by turning up the volume for E-Street Radio, Bruce Springsteen's 24/7 music channel or catch the latest updates on the game from ESPN without having to step away from the burgers and great weather.

The sports fanatic

If pops is an avid baseball or soccer fan, give him the gift of a family sports day, with tickets to his team's next game for an outing you can all enjoy with him. Don't forget to treat him to some traditional stadium fare — hotdogs, popcorn and a refreshing beverage will make dad more than happy as he cheers on his favourite players.

The chef

Father's Day coincides with the summer grilling season. Consider a gift of a stainless steel barbecue set. Dad will appreciate the look and feel of the tools for making the perfect summertime backyard meal for friends and family.

The outdoorsman

Is dad restless unless he gets outside, regardless of the time of year or season? Consider getting him into a new outdoor hobby to pass the time — a fishing rod, golf clubs, or even a pair of snowshoes might be just the ticket for a unique gift that will and impress.

Whatever you decide to gift dad with this year, don't forget that a hug and an appreciative thanks for being "the best dad ever" is more than enough in his eyes, and one you will be sure he will love.

Homemade gifts offer the personal touch

Dad is certainly worth more than a piece of plastic. A study conducted by H&R

Block indicates that people spend an average of $90 on gifts for Father's Day and that gift cards are the most popular purchase.

However, many experts are noticing an increasing trend towards gifts with a more personal touch, and Father's Day is the perfect opportunity to do exactly that.

"Showing your love and appreciation for dad doesn't have to cost a fortune," said Shelli Gardner, CEO and Co-founder of crafting company Stampin' Up! "The gift with the greatest impact, the one that shows you truly want to make someone feel special, is the one you make yourself."

This year, why not celebrate Father's Day and recognize the special men who have made a difference in our lives by preparing a gift that reflects his personality. Gardner suggests the following Father's Day gift ideas that will inspire seasoned crafters and beginners alike:

- Handmade cards: A timeless classic, handmade cards are a great way to take the time to share a meaningful message with dad. The key to crafting the perfect card is to keep it simple. It's as easy as folding a piece of neutrals collection cardstock and gluing complementary coloured cut-outs, which will add some depth to the card. Embellishments, such as buttons, will add a nice finishing touch, and a warm message that comes from the heart will be the ultimate step in completing this project. Enjoying the experience is key. No matter what the final result, this simple project will certainly put a smile on dad's face.

- Personalized goody box. Is dad the sweet or savoury type? Offering him his favourite treat is always rewarding — for both the person on the giving and on the receiving end. All that is required is a bag box, which can be filled with his favourite snack and decorated with a selection of stamps and paper accents. Wrapping the box with a nice ribbon ties everything together neatly.

- Decorated picture frame. Nothing immortalizes a special moment like a picture. Offering a decorated picture frame is a Father's Day gift that will last a lifetime.

Dad's domain. Create the ultimate man cave

The kids own the living room, the mom owns the kitchen, the family pet might even claim the backyard, but where is dad's domain?

This Father's Day, give dad the perfect gift — the ultimate man cave. Turn the garage into a comfortable and useable space by transforming this often forgotten extension of the home, into the envy of the neighbourhood.

• Food: It all starts with food, regardless of the season. He will love a fridge that can stand up to intense heat and harsh Canadian cold. So whether it's golf or hockey season, dad is never more than a few steps away from helping himself to a beverage or snack.

• Entertaining: No doubt dad loves it when friends and neighbours pop by for a visit. The garage can become a comfortable hub for entertaining if organized well. Make sure there is enough open floor space and seating for everyone to enjoy themselves. Now dad can host his friends for games or gatherings without monopolizing the family room.

• Toys: Whether we are talking tools, electronics or sporting equipment, the man cave is all about creating a space that dad will love, surrounded by his favourite toys.

• Kick back: The dust and grime on old cement flooring can make it difficult for anyone to enjoy themselves. Try something simple but with huge impact like custom tile flooring: sleek, clean and specifically for the garage.

With these few simple steps, you can create the ultimate man cave for Father's Day that will be enjoyed for many years to come.

Three sisters, two cookbooks, one delicious chicken dish

Three sisters who came to Canada from Greece as children are celebrating their heritage through photos and recipes in a follow-up to their first award-winning cookbook.

"We didn't want to do the typical thing people would expect in a Greek cookbook, which was beautiful pictures of Greek islands," says Eleni Bakopoulos of the book Three Sisters Back to the Beginning: Timeless Greek Recipes Made Simple. "We really wanted to be about the Greek lifestyle that we knew it to be, how food is connected to family and relationships and friendships and it really brings us all together."

The second book incorporates recipes omitted from the first book due to space (both volumes are self-published).

They also included dishes from the Greek islands and the north.

Try out this recipe from the book.

Ingredients

- 4 chicken breasts, boneless and skinless
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) olive oil
- 3 ml (3/4 tsp) salt
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) dried oregano
- Fresh cracked pepper

Dressing

- 75 ml (1/3 cup) olive oil
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) fresh squeezed lemon juice
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) dried oregano
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) salt

Grilled Lemon Chicken

1. Heat grill to 230 C (450 F).

2. Coat chicken on both sides with olive oil and season with salt, oregano and pepper.

3. Place chicken directly on grill and grill for 8 to 12 minutes or until chicken is firm to the touch and opaque all the way through. Ensure barbecue lid is closed as much as possible while cooking, and turn breasts over only once.

4. Remove chicken from grill, cover with aluminum foil and set aside to rest for 5 minutes.

5. Meanwhile, in a small bowl, whisk dressing ingredients together.

6. Use a sharp knife to cut chicken into slices. Drizzle dressing over chicken and serve immediately. THE CANADIAN PRESS/THREE SISTERS BACK TO THE BEGINNING: TIMELESS GREEK RECIPES MADE SIMPLE BY BETTY, ELENI AND SAMANTHA BAKOPOULOS (ADELPHI PUBLISHING, 2013).

The art of Mediterranean eats

In Three Sisters Back to the Beginning by Betty, Eleni and Samantha Bakopoulos, the sisters balance fast and easy family favourites such as Shrimp Saganaki with recipes that slow you down, and make you wait with anticipation like Homemade Yogurt and succulent Lamb Shanks.

Readers are also taken on a nostalgic journey that documents the magic of childhood and the connection between family, place, and identity.

Three Sisters Back to the Beginning is both a cookbook and an inspiring art book. METRO

How to make your small kitchen sizzle

DIY ideas. If you're in an apartment or small space, your kitchen shouldn't have to suffer

There are many solutions for making a small space bigger, so follow some of the ideas below to create a kitchen that's comfortable, functional and beautiful.

1 Focus on function! Scale back on appliances so your kitchen isn't full of large items that you never use. Consider what's really necessary for your space before automatically including anything that can take up valuable space.

2 Invest in multi-purpose pieces. Storage benches or other items that perform more than one task are invaluable in a small space and can keep your small kitchen organized and tidy.

3 Open storage is a great way to create a spacious feeling. While cupboards close off the room, opening up those areas can not only create a fun way to display your kitchen items, but also make the room feel bigger.

4 Mix it up! Pair different materials and shapes in your design, like rectangular cupboards with a curved kitchen island.

5 Implement glass features — in doors or elsewhere — in order to expand the space and make it feel bigger than it actually is.

6 Find a folding table. A kitchen table with a drop-down top or additional leaves can be a great addition to a small space that will accommodate more people when needed.

7 Put thought into lighting. Pairing both fluorescent and pendant lighting can create depth and colour in a kitchen that wouldn't have it with a standard light fixture.

8 Don't underestimate flooring! In a small space, you can add details to the floor that will add size to the room and also create a fantastic first impression. Try going further with colourful tiles or designs.

9 Inject colour. Strong colours fool the eye into making the space seem larger — so go for that bold red or bright yellow in your small kitchen.

10 Look up! If you haven't made your floor the centre of attention, think about the ceiling. Paint it a different colour, add a unique light fixture or add texture — all of these things will draw the eye upward and create height in your small space.

Kuchar primed to make a major splash

U.S. Open. From following in Tiger's footsteps to falling off the PGA tour, Kuchar's climb continues at Merion Golf Club

He was the smiling kid with his dad on the bag in his first U.S. Open, eager to be himself and not the guy he was following.

Matt Kuchar never expected to be the next Tiger Woods, mostly because even then he knew it wasn't possible. Winning the U.S. Amateur a year after Woods recorded his third straight amateur title got him into the 1998 Open, but it would be a long time before the two were in the same conversation again.

"I was never thinking because I won the amateur the year after Tiger that I was the next Tiger Woods," Kuchar said. "That was never something that I thought about or thought I was going to follow the same path as Tiger. I knew I had a different path that was for me."

That path was rocky at times, but Kuchar never lost faith in his talent. He rebuilt his swing, found his way back on the PGA Tour after a brief hiccup, and started contending in tournaments.

Now he's in another conversation this week at Merion Golf Club. He's joined a select few as perhaps the best player who hasn't won a major championship. That he's not shying away from the talk says something about how confident he is about his game.

"I feel like I'm playing some good golf," said Kuchar, who won at Memorial two weeks ago.

"Certainly a major championship, a U.S. Open, is one I'm geared up for. I'm looking forward to competing and trying to put my name on this trophy."

Goodell sticks up for Redskins name

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell says the Washington Redskins nickname is a "unifying force that stands for strength, courage, pride and respect."

Goodell was responding to a letter from 10 members of U.S. Congress who want the name changed because it is offensive to many Native Americans.

He cited the nickname's origins and polls that support its popularity. Goodell wrote that he understands the feelings surrounding it are complex and could change, but he also points out fan pride in the team's heritage.

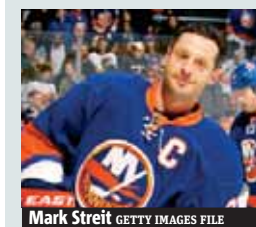

The name is the subject of a legal challenge from a group seeking to have the team lose its trademark protection. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flyers hope to get Streit to their point

The Philadelphia Flyers acquired defenceman Mark Streit from the New York Islanders Wednesday for minor-league forward Shane Harper and a fourth-round pick in 2014.

Streit is scheduled to become an unrestricted free agent on July 5. The Flyers can negotiate a new deal with him exclusively until that time. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bombers hope for long-term investment

Bombers quarterback Buck Pierce gets taken down by the Argos' Bryan Payton during the first pre-season football game at Investors Group Field on Wednesday night in Winnipeg. The Bombers lost 24-6. JOHN WOODS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The cowbells rang and the horns blew as Investors Group Field was christened but the Toronto Argonauts spoiled the party with a 24-6 exhibition win over the Blue Bombers Wednesday.

Last year's Grey Cup champions brought their backup quarterbacks and a cast of newcomers to town and still looked confident on the newest turf in the CFL.

The Bombers opened with starter Buck Pierce but pulled him midway through the first quarter, putting in Max Hall, one of the two newcomers in camp this season to challenge for No. 1 backup.

Hall played the rest of the first half. Justin Goltz took over in the second, the only backup the Bombers retained from last season. The other newcomer, Chase Clement, saw action in the fourth quarter.

The Bombers scored first at their new home. Justin Palardy put them on the board with less than two minutes left in the first quarter with a 34-yard field goal.

But Toronto's Gerald Riggs had the first touchdown a 20-yard run at 1:49 of the second to make it 7-3.

Toronto made it 14-3 before the end of the first half after quarterback Zach Collaros hit Trent Guy with a five-yard touchdown pass.

Toronto kicker Anthony Alix extended it to 17-3 at the 4:27 mark of the third quarter.

How the Spurs melted Miami

Five things to take away from the San Antonio Spurs' 113-77 win over the Miami Heat in Game 3 of the NBA Finals on Tuesday night:

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Photos by Getty Images/The Associated Press

LeBron is mad

One has to wonder if it's time for LeBron James to go into video game mode. Or if James can even go into his unstoppable phase. James has 50 points through Game 3 with his shooting numbers getting worse in each game — 7 for 16, then 7 for 17, then 7 for 21. "I've got to be better," James said after the game. If he doesn't, the Heat's reign as champions could be over in a few days.

GMs are bad

OK, that's an overstatement. Sort of, anyway. Danny Green was the 46th pick in the 2009 NBA draft. Gary Neal wasn't drafted by anyone. And they were the absolute heroes for the Spurs in Game 3, combining for 13 three-pointers and 51 points in San Antonio's rout.

Miller's time

Mike Miller's uncanny run of shooting in finals games continues. He took five shots in Game 3, all from three-point range, and they all dropped through the net. In his last four finals games, he's an absurd 16 for 18 from three. Overall in this post-season, he's connected on 14 of 28 three-pointers.

Parker's status

Tony Parker and all of San Antonio spent a restless night worrying about a gimpy right hamstring that hampered him in Game 3 and threatened the momentum the Spurs seized.

Parker had an MRI on Wednesday that revealed a Grade 1 strain of his hamstring, the mildest level of strain. He's listed as day-to-day.

Coming up

Both teams practised Wednesday, with most of the attention on Parker's leg and what the Heat will do to try to get back on track. Game 4 goes Thursday night in San Antonio (9 p.m., TSN).

Coyotes ugly

Phoenix struggles still hang over NHL

NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly says it's possible the Phoenix Coyotes could relocate if a new ownership group can't reach a deal to keep the team in Glendale, Ariz.

The Coyotes' unstable situation appears to be the biggest issue facing the league, and commissioner Gary Bettman said "time is getting short" finding a solution to keep the team in Arizona.

"It's been a complicated process," Bettman said Wednesday before Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final. "We, in our minds, understand that we're dealing with a time frame, but a specific day isn't going to do it. But time is getting short and this is really going to be a decision that the city of Glendale is going to have to make."

Daly said the 2013-14 schedule will be released a bit later than usual in part because of the uncertainty surrounding the Coyotes.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

If there is something you want to tell the world, you will get your chance over the next few days. Whether it's worth hearing remains to be seen but you will certainly make your point — maybe quite loudly!

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

You are about to benefit from a remarkable stroke of luck but you will kick yourself if you don't take full advantage of it. Partners and loved ones may kick you too.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may have energy to spare today but that does not mean you can waste it. The Sun, Mars and Jupiter in your sign make all things possible, but there is one thing only you should be focusing on now.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You seem to be a bit more adventurous than usual, and that's good. You certainly won't worry what the neighbours might think about what you are up to. In fact, you will quite enjoy shocking them.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

No matter how much time and energy you put into something, if your heart is not in it you won't do a good job. The message of the stars is to love what you are doing.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

The only reason you are under pressure is because you have too many things on the go. And the only reason you have too many things on the go is because you can't say "no".

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You have a busy schedule, so if you get the chance to take a break over the next 24 hours you would be wise not to waste it. You may not get another opportunity for quite some time.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

One course of action is right and one course of action is wrong. Not that it matters a whole lot to you. It seems you have already decided what it is you are going to do.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

It is important that you give loved ones space to be themselves today, because if you restrict their freedom they may rebel. Do you fear losing them? That's more likely to happen if you cling too tightly.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Promise yourself that no matter how irritating certain people may be, you won't let them get under your skin. The only weapons they have to use against you are words and words only hurt if you let them.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

What happens today may or may not be important but how you react to it most certainly is. The best reaction is to steer a middle course. Try not to be either too happy or too sad.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Something will occur today that makes you look at life in a slightly different way. Once you get past certain ideas that have been holding you back, you will discover a new world of possibilities. SALLY BROMPTON
